HOW THEY SHOP

British consumers blend many resources to shop for clothing. They shop at an average of four types of stores with no single type dominating the retail landscape. With near-universal internet access (94% regularly use the internet)¹, Britons use the internet both to find clothing inspiration and to purchase items. Help consumers plan and execute their clothes shopping by speaking to them across multiple physical and online outlets.

WHAT THEY SHOP

British consumers look for clothing to fit well and feel comfortable, and they are willing to pay more for quality. They stock up on basics, such as owning on average 19 pairs of underwear and 14 t-shirts. Eight in ten consumers (82%) say their most-worn clothing is made of cotton and they are most interested in technologies to increase comfort throughout their days. Meet British consumers' needs with high quality, comfortable clothing made with cotton-rich fabrics.
